

LOEB HAS SESSION AT THE TREASURY

Customs Collector in Long Conference on Topic Kept Secret.

A three-hour conference, which is to be resumed at 3 o'clock this afternoon when the Secretary of the Treasury will be consulted, was held this morning between Collector Loeb, of the port of New York, Assistant Secretary Curtis, of the Treasury, and a number of agents of the New York customs service.

The greatest secrecy was maintained at the Treasury Department as to the nature of the prolonged session. It is believed, however, that the recent customs frauds, and the disclosure of undervaluations, together with the so-called "immunity plea" of a number of wealthy importers who are alleged to have been beneficiaries of a system of smuggling operations, were the subjects which brought the collector and his assistants to Washington.

At 1:30 o'clock, after the customs officials had been closeted for several hours, it was announced at the office of Assistant Secretary Curtis that there would be no statement forthcoming from the present as to the nature of Mr. Loeb's call. The collector sent word that he could not discuss the object of the conference until it is concluded. This, it is understood, will not be until Mr. Loeb and Mr. Curtis have talked with Secretary MacVane.

Mr. Loeb probably will remain in Washington until tomorrow.

Shake-up in Customs. Smuggling operations on a large scale, said to have extended over a period of years, recently have been unearthed at the New York port. There have also been rumors of a wholesale shake-up in the customs service and a significant number of lines all along, as was evidenced by the appointment of Chief Wilkie in charge of the special agents.

The prominence of the officials concerned in today's conference leads to the belief that these questions and the immunity pleas of certain exporters who are alleged to have been caught in their smuggling operations, have been put up to the highest authorities for decision.

Arrived Today. Collector Loeb arrived in Washington early this morning, having taken a night train from New York. He went at once to the office of Assistant Secretary Curtis, and remained closeted with him throughout the rest of the morning.

With the collector were several officials in the customs service at the port of New York. These men were included in the gathering which conferred in the office of the Assistant Secretary. They were: J. W. Wheatley and J. C. Cummings, special agents of the customs service; J. H. Krackey, naval officer of the port of New York; Solicitor Andrews, of the office of the collector of the port of New York.

UNWRITTEN LAW FAILS IN THIS CASE

WHEELING, W. Va., Nov. 28.—The unwritten law today failed to save Hayes Cook, a deputy sheriff of Wyoming county, from punishment for shooting and killing Leon Stewart, who, Cook claimed, had become unfriendly with Mrs. Cook. The killing took place last summer.

The prisoner was sentenced to three years' imprisonment at Pineville.

WILLIAM LOEB, JR., United States Customs Collector at New York, in Long Conference Today With Assistant Secretary Curtis at the Treasury.

AMERICAN SAILORS TEL. OF ROBBERY

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Letters received here from members of the American battleship fleet now anchored at Brest and Cherbourg give details of the recent troubles the American Jackies have had in those ports on account of the rapacity and even thievery of French traders and shopkeepers.

Not only have the American soldiers been charged four and five times the ordinary price for everything, but spurious French money has been passed on them in quantities.

Even the French newspapers have realized the folly of killing the "coco" that lays the golden egg, and have urged that the robbery of Americans stop, else tourists will shun France.

It is conceded that the American sailors have conducted themselves with rare good behavior in the face of great provocation.

GIRLS PLAN TO STUDY CONDITIONS IN DISTRICT

Industrial Status of Child Laborers, Housing of the City Poor, and Other Sociological Problems to Be Investigated.

"Who will offer to investigate the industrial conditions under which child laborers in the District work?" "I will," answer a score of voices at once.

"Very good. You take that subject, Miss Brown. There are other things for the rest of you to do, girls. Which one of you will investigate and report on how Washington city houses its poor, with especial reference to rents and sanitary conditions in our alleys?"

"And again, a dozen or more enthusiastic young women chorus, 'I will.'"

So this particular investigation is assigned to Miss Smith, but the other enthusiasts are assured that there will be work to spare for each woman who wants to know the city in which she lives, and the social problems in Washington which are crying loudly for consideration and correction. There are charities, institutions, and schools to be investigated. There are facts to be gathered on tuberculosis children in the District. There is knowledge of all sorts to be had on the social problems which confront the community.

And so it comes about that the philanthropic and public institutions of the District of Columbia will be under the investigation, for some weeks to come, from a body of as enthusiastic young women as ever banded together to seek enlightenment on the sociological conditions of the city in which they live and work and play.

Miss Jean Cole, teacher of sociology and English at Mt. Vernon Seminary, heads the class of social workers, teachers, and other thoughtful young women who will meet every Monday afternoon at the Young Women's Christian Association to compare notes on the investigation lines in the District of Columbia.

A study of the public school system of Washington with especial reference to the enforcement of truancy laws, medical inspection, fire protection, and ventilation, will occupy the class during the present week, and at the meeting on next Monday afternoon reports will be made by the several women who have undertaken to make investigations.
